

Our Clinics...

Netty & Kevin's clinics offer a plethora of experience based on two very different worlds that have merged together to offer a very rare clinic experience.

Annette (Netty) has had a lifetime of experience within the horse industry and has won many national honors in a variety of performance disciplines.

Kevin is a rancher, performance horse trainer and a NRCHA judge and competitor for over 15 years.

Netty's strong understanding of groundwork and the mechanics of the physical working of the horse and rider in combination with Kevin's understanding of the stock horse, both in the show pen and on the ranch, will give you the rider, the best from both worlds. Together they provide a very special opportunity for their students. By limiting the number of participants, they are able to offer individual attention to every horse and rider. They establish a relationship with their students and each leaves with a plan of what to work on for the future.

This is an opportunity for you, the student, to work with two very skilled clinicians in a positive, educational and fun learning environment for horse and rider. We welcome riders of every discipline, skill level and will tailor our approach to meet you and your horses individual needs. We look forward to you joining us at one of our upcoming clinics.

Horsemanship / Cow Work Clinics

Annette (Netty) Coker...

- Over 40 years of riding, training, showing, breeding & consulting experience
- Won multiple National Honors in several disciplines within the Arabian and Half Arabian Horse Show Industry, spanning a 30 year career
- Earned her Jockey's License in the early 80's and raced successfully for several years
- Owned and operated her own training business for over 20 years
- Travels the US teaching horsemanship clinics

Annette appeared in the award winning documentary Buck. She attributes much of her philosophy on horses, as well as her own life experience within the multiple riding disciplines to her success as a teacher. Her passion for developing beautiful ranch and bridle horses enables her to teach from a standpoint of experience and exposure to most any discipline or riding skill regardless of the student's ability.

Kevin Meyer...

- Raised on a cow/calf operation in South Eastern Wyoming
- Worked as a working cowboy and colt starter
- Hired by Wagonhound Land and Livestock, Horse Division Manager for over 3 years
- Owns and Operates his own horse training business
- Runs cattle on several leased ranches in South East Wyoming
- NRCHA Judge and competitor with over 15 years experience in the Performance Arena
- Conducts Cow Horse and Ranch Versatility Clinics throughout the US

Kevin has unique experience with a presence in both the show arena as well as the ranch world. He works to have his ranch horses ride like show horses and he wants them to work a cow with precision, know how to spin and how to stop. He trains his show horses to have the same mental approach to their job as an honest ranch horse, where they don't get hot. He doesn't want to have to lope his horses for two hours in order to show them for two and a half minutes. He wants to unload a horse off the trailer, trot them around for a little bit, and then go show them.

Kevin believes a horse can perform and also be relaxed. Finding the balance between these two things is important. He thinks a lot of cowboys could learn from the show world, but the show world could learn a lot from how cowboys ride and treat their horses.
